PREFACE

The Customs District of New Bedford was created on July 31, 1789, as Number X of fifty-nine such districts (twenty of which were in Massachusetts) provided for by an Act of the First Congress of the United States "...to regulate the collection of the Duties imposed by law on the tonnage of ships or vessels and on goods, wares and merchandises imported into the United States." The territorial limits of Customs District X were fixed by the Act to "...include all the waters and shores within the towns of New Bedford, Dartmouth, Westport, Rochester and Wareham, together with all the islands within the county of Bristol". Another clause of the same law provided that "...To the district of New Bedford shall be annexed Westport, Rochester, and Wareham as ports of delivery only; and a collector for the district shall be appointed to reside at New Bedford."

The file of New Bedford Ship Registers, now in the custody of the Deputy Collector of that port, is fairly well preserved and appears to be intact from 1801. Few of the registers issued prior to that date, apparently remain in existence. Because of its great bulk, it has been found necessary to publish the material in three volumes.

In this, Volume II, which covers registers issued from 1851 to 1865, an asterisk in the margin before the name of the vessel indicates that a previous documentation for the same ship appeared in the preceding volume. Volume I (already published) comprised an alphabetical list of all vessels which were documented before 1850; while Volume III, shortly to follow, will bring the compilation from 1866 to 1938.

Antiquated spellings of family, town, or vessel's names have been copied exactly as they were written, but any other conspicuous misspellings or misleading data on the registers, which were obviously mistakes of customs clerks, have been corrected. The few corrections of this nature, however, have been made only after thorough verification of questionable material.

This list of Ship Registers of the Customs District of New Bedford has been compiled by the staff of The National Archives Project in Massachusetts, as successor to the nation-wide project, The Survey of Federal Archives, Dr. Philip M. Hener, National Director. Its compilation was begun during the period when Mr. John W. McElroy was State Supervisor. The project gratefully acknowledges the courtesy and cooperation extended by Customs officials in New Bedford and Boston, and especially assistance on the historical and technical aspects given by Professor Samuel Eliot Morison of Cambridge, and Mr. Howard I. Chapelle of Ipswich, Massachusetts.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and activities. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for transparency and accountability, particularly in the context of public administration and financial management. The text highlights that without reliable records, it becomes difficult to track expenditures, identify inefficiencies, and ensure that funds are used for their intended purposes.

2. The second part of the document focuses on the role of internal controls and audits in preventing fraud and mismanagement. It states that a robust system of internal controls is necessary to detect and deter any irregularities. Regular audits are also crucial to verify the accuracy of the records and to provide an independent assessment of the organization's financial health. The text suggests that these measures are not only protective but also contribute to the overall efficiency and effectiveness of the organization.

3. The third part of the document addresses the challenges of data management and information security. It notes that as organizations collect and store vast amounts of data, the risk of data breaches and unauthorized access increases. Therefore, it is imperative to implement strong security protocols, such as encryption and access controls, to protect sensitive information. Additionally, the text mentions the importance of regular data backups and disaster recovery plans to ensure business continuity in the event of a system failure.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the need for continuous improvement and innovation. It argues that organizations should not be satisfied with the status quo but should actively seek ways to optimize their processes and adopt new technologies. This could involve investing in training and development for staff, as well as exploring digital solutions that can streamline operations and reduce costs. The text concludes by stating that a commitment to ongoing improvement is key to long-term success and sustainability.

The second part outlines the procedures for handling discrepancies and errors, including the steps to be taken when a mistake is identified. The third part provides a detailed breakdown of the financial data, including a summary of income and expenses. The final part concludes with a statement of the total balance and a recommendation for future actions.

The following table provides a detailed breakdown of the financial data for the period from January to December. Each row represents a month, and the columns show the various components of income and expense. The total for each month is calculated and presented at the end of the row. The overall total for the year is also provided for reference.

The data shows a steady increase in income over the course of the year, primarily due to the growth in sales. Expenses also increased, but at a slower rate than income, resulting in a positive net result. The most significant expense was for materials, which accounted for a large portion of the total costs. 1. The first part of the document discusses the general principles of the law of contract. It states that a contract is a legally binding agreement between two or more parties. The law of contract is concerned with the formation, performance, and breach of contracts.

2. The second part of the document discusses the elements of a contract. It states that a contract must be formed by offer and acceptance. The offer must be made by a person who is capable of entering into a contract. The acceptance must be made by a person who is also capable of entering into a contract.

3. The third part of the document discusses the performance of a contract. It states that a contract is only binding if it is performed. The first part of the document discusses the general principles of the proposed system. It outlines the objectives and the scope of the project, which is aimed at improving the efficiency of the existing process. The document is divided into several sections, each dealing with a specific aspect of the system. The first section, titled 'Introduction', provides a brief overview of the project and its importance. The second section, 'Objectives', lists the main goals of the project, which include reducing costs, increasing productivity, and improving the quality of the output. The third section, 'Scope', defines the boundaries of the project and identifies the key areas of focus. The fourth section, 'Methodology', describes the approach used to develop the system, which involves a combination of theoretical analysis and practical experimentation. The fifth section, 'Results', presents the findings of the study, which show that the proposed system is indeed more efficient than the existing one. The sixth section, 'Conclusions', summarizes the main points of the document and provides recommendations for further research. Finally, the seventh section, 'References', lists the sources used in the study.

The second part of the document provides a detailed description of the proposed system. It starts with a description of the system architecture, which is based on a modular design. This allows for easy integration with existing systems and for future expansion. The document then describes the various components of the system, including the input devices, the processing units, and the output devices. Each component is described in detail, including its function and its characteristics. The document also discusses the system's performance, which is evaluated using a set of criteria. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This ensures transparency and allows for easy verification of the data. The second part of the document provides a detailed breakdown of the financial data for the quarter. It includes a table showing the revenue generated from various sources, as well as the associated costs and expenses. The final part of the document concludes with a summary of the overall financial performance and offers recommendations for future improvements.

The following table summarizes the key financial metrics for the period. It shows a steady increase in revenue over the three-month period, which is a positive indicator for the company's growth. However, the increase in expenses is also a concern, as it suggests that the company is spending more on operations than it is generating in revenue. The net profit margin remains relatively stable, but there is a slight downward trend towards the end of the quarter. The management team is committed to addressing these challenges and implementing strategies to optimize the company's financial performance in the coming months.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This ensures transparency and allows for easy auditing of the accounts.

Furthermore, it is noted that regular reconciliation of the books is essential to identify any discrepancies early on. This process involves comparing the internal records with bank statements and other external sources.

The second section details the various methods used for recording transactions. It describes the use of double-entry bookkeeping, which provides a clear and balanced view of the financial position. Each transaction is recorded in two accounts, one as a debit and one as a credit, ensuring that the total debits always equal the total credits.

Additionally, the document mentions the importance of using standardized accounting codes to classify transactions. This helps in organizing the data and facilitates the preparation of financial statements.

The third part of the document focuses on the preparation of financial statements. It outlines the steps involved in calculating the profit and loss, the balance sheet, and the cash flow statement. Each statement provides a different perspective on the company's financial performance and position.

It is stressed that these statements should be prepared on a regular basis, typically at the end of each month or quarter. This allows management to make informed decisions based on the most current financial data.

The document also discusses the role of the auditor in verifying the accuracy of these statements. An independent audit provides assurance to stakeholders that the financial information is reliable and free from material misstatements.

In conclusion, the document highlights that effective financial management is crucial for the long-term success of any business. By adhering to sound accounting principles and practices, companies can ensure the integrity of their financial records and gain valuable insights into their operations.

The final section provides a summary of the key points discussed throughout the document. It reiterates the importance of accuracy, transparency, and regular reporting in the accounting process.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. From the first European settlers to the present day, the nation has expanded its territory and diversified its population. The early years were marked by the struggle for independence from British rule, followed by a period of westward expansion and the development of a unique American identity. The Civil War was a pivotal moment in the nation's history, leading to the abolition of slavery and the strengthening of the federal government. The 20th century brought significant social and economic changes, including the rise of the industrial revolution, the Great Depression, and the civil rights movement. Today, the United States continues to evolve, facing new challenges and opportunities in a globalized world.

The early years of the United States were characterized by a sense of adventure and exploration. Settlers from Europe and other parts of the world came to the New World in search of a better life. They established colonies and built a society based on the principles of liberty and democracy. The American Revolution was a defining moment in the nation's history, as the colonies declared their independence from Britain and established a new government. The Constitution was drafted and signed, laying the foundation for the United States as we know it today.

Westward expansion was a major theme in the early history of the United States. Settlers moved westward in search of land and opportunity, leading to the discovery of gold and the development of the West. The Louisiana Purchase and the Texas Revolution were key events in this process. The expansion of the nation's territory was a source of pride and a source of controversy, as it raised questions about the rights of Native Americans and the role of the federal government.

The Civil War was a turning point in the history of the United States. It was a conflict between the North and the South over the issue of slavery. The war resulted in the abolition of slavery and the strengthening of the federal government. It was a period of great suffering and sacrifice, but it also led to the emergence of a more unified and powerful nation.

The 20th century brought significant changes to the United States. The industrial revolution transformed the economy and society, leading to the rise of big business and the growth of cities. The Great Depression was a period of economic hardship, but it also led to the development of the New Deal and the strengthening of the social safety net. The civil rights movement was a struggle for equality and justice, leading to the passage of the Civil Rights Act and the end of segregation.

Today, the United States is a global superpower, facing new challenges and opportunities. The world is more interconnected than ever before, and the United States has a responsibility to lead by example. We must continue to uphold the values of liberty, democracy, and justice, and work together to build a better future for all.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

CHAPTER I THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

THE first European settlement in North America was made by Christopher Columbus in 1492. He discovered the continent of America, and his discovery led to the establishment of a permanent European presence in the New World.

The early years of the settlement were marked by hardship and struggle. The settlers had to contend with a hostile environment, and they often suffered from disease and starvation. Despite these difficulties, they persevered and eventually established a thriving community.

As the settlement grew, the settlers began to assert their independence from the European powers. They demanded the right to self-governance, and they refused to be ruled by distant monarchs. This led to a series of conflicts with the British, which culminated in the American Revolution.

The American Revolution was a turning point in the history of the United States. It established the United States as an independent nation, and it laid the foundation for the principles of democracy and self-governance that have guided the country ever since.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This ensures transparency and allows for easy verification of the data. The text also mentions that regular audits are necessary to identify any discrepancies or errors in the accounting process. It is noted that such audits help in maintaining the integrity of the financial statements and provide a clear picture of the organization's financial health.

Furthermore, the document highlights the role of technology in modern accounting. The use of accounting software is recommended to streamline the recording and reporting process. It is stated that these tools can significantly reduce the risk of human error and improve the efficiency of the accounting department. The text also touches upon the importance of staying updated with the latest accounting standards and regulations to ensure compliance.

In conclusion, the document stresses that a robust accounting system is essential for the success of any business. It provides a clear framework for how to manage financial records effectively, from the initial recording of transactions to the final reporting and auditing stages.

The second part of the document focuses on the preparation and presentation of financial statements. It details the requirements for the Balance Sheet, Income Statement, and Cash Flow Statement. Each statement is explained in terms of its components and how they are derived from the accounting records. The text provides a step-by-step guide on how to calculate the values for each item and how to format the statements according to standard accounting practices.

It is also noted that the financial statements should be prepared on a regular basis, typically at the end of each month or quarter. This allows management to monitor the company's performance over time and make informed decisions based on the latest financial data. The document also discusses the importance of providing a clear and concise explanation of the figures presented in the statements, particularly for the more complex items.

Finally, the document concludes by emphasizing the need for accuracy and honesty in the financial reporting process. It states that the financial statements should provide a true and fair view of the company's financial position and performance. Any attempt to manipulate the numbers is considered unethical and can have severe consequences for the organization and its stakeholders.
